whether they will prosecute the work on the aqueduct, at a cost of $2,400,000, or whether they will lose the benefit of the $100,000 already expended. There was another plan, by which the projectors state they will be able, at an expense of only $1,000,000, to supply those two cities with water. Therefore, the Committee of Ways and Means could not bring themselves to recommend a concurrence in the Senate's amendment of $500,000. There was another important amendment, making appropriations for certain unstorn.

There was another important amendment, making appropriations for certain custom-houses, but these were not to supply deficiencies, in the opinion of the Committee of Ways and Means, and from this reason they recommended a disagreement.

He explained other amendments, and assigned reasons why they should not be concurred in; and in conclusion said he proposed the debate should be closed at an early day. Very much of the money is needed at this moment to defray the ordinary expenses of the government, and hence the pressing necessity for definite action upon this bill.

NERRASKA AND KANSAS.

Mr. PHILIPS proceeded to speak in favor of the Nebraska-Kansas bill, which, he said, had been assailed by many members of this House, who, while admitting the correctness of the principle on which it is founded, objected to it because it pro-posed to repeal the Missouri act of 1820. But if this act has no further claim on our consideration this act has no further claim on our consideration than its own intrinsic merits, it would surely be illogical to say the wrong of our predecessors should be a bar to righteous action on our part. It had been said this act of 1820 was more than a legislative act—that it was a binding compact. If this, he said, were true, whatever might be the merits of the measure before us, it could receive the assent or consumers. the assent or concurrence of no honorable man. He had looked to the journals of the two houses of Congress of 1820 and 1821. The truth of a of Congress of 1820 and 1821. The truth of a proposition is not to be proven on hearsay evidence, not on uncertain memory, but by the records—the faithful chroniclers of the past and the uncering guides for the future. He then proceeded to examine the journals; and, after doing so, remarked that, so far from these showing that there was any contract or agreement between the representative from the non-slaveholding States and the representatives from the slaveholding States, they clearly disprove the assertion, and, in conclusion, showed that the bill was eminently entitled to the favor of southern representatives.

Mr. Harris, of Mississippi, commenced a speech against the Nebraska bill, in its present form, declaring his readiness to take it up for amendment; but, before he proceeded far, he yielded the floor for a motion that the committee rise; which prevailed.

The House then adjourned.

MADRID, March 30 .- It is stated that the ex-Queen of the French, now at Seville, has for some time past been arranging a marriage bebetween a prince of the house of Coburg (the Roman Catholic branch, it is to be presumed) and a daughter of the Infante Don Francisco de Paula. The affianced pair were to meet for the first time at Seville, during the approaching solemnities of the holy week. It would appear, however, that difficulties have arisen in the way of the match, and these are supposed from the marriage of the father of the bride with a woman of infamous character, too well known at Madrid by the name of Teresa

For some years past the connexion between this woman and the uncle of the Queen was notorious, and so scandalous, that Don Francisco de Paula's daughters were removed to the palace from their father's residence at the Retiro, where he has since lived with this woman for whom he is building a magnificent house near the Plaza del Oriente. A few weeks ago, however, the Infante was seized with qualma of conscience, and addressed himself to his son, the King, saying that he was desirous of mar rying his mistress, and intimated that there would be nothing more shocking in such a union than in that which a Dowager Queen of Spain had contracted with the man of her choice.

The King, taking a moral view of the ques-tion, approved his father's proposed amend-ment of his mode of life, and the marriage was duly declared. One of its consequences, rumor now says, has been the rupture of the proposed Coburg alliance, the friends of the German being disgusted at the mesalliance of the intended father-in-law. Other accounts are to the effect that the contemplated union has been broken off by English interference; but, whether this statement be true, or the interference proceeded from the prince's more immefamily and rights, is of little moment, either being probable and highly justifiable.

The family of Don Francisco de Paula famous for misallying itself. Not one of his married children has espoused an equal, and consequently they have all been deprived of their rights as infantes of Spain. Don Enrique married a lady of no particular family, a daugh ter of Count Castello, no match for him; one of his sisters married the son of a Spanish nobleman; another a Havanese of the name of Guell. These marriages, although unquestionably unequal, cannot be considered dis-graceful; but that poor old creature, Don Fran-cisco, has gone far beyond all his children by taking to the altar a woman whose character can only be indicated by the strongest word that describes female profligacy.

The projected journey of Queen Maria Chrisfor one important object, I am informed, the arrangement of the marriage of one of her daughters with a person of high birth and great wealth, whose name has not vet become public. I learn at the last moment that the Duke of Alba and the Countess de Montijo have set out to-day for Paris.

Taken in connexion with the coolness I mer tioned as existing between the Countess and the Queen Mother, and with the printed sketch of a projected regency said to be circulated on the French frontier, and in which the Duke of Alba's name was put prominently forward, this sudden move merits attention. The duke is, perhaps, desirous to be out of the way, lest, if a copy of the paper in question should reach the palace here, he might be shipped off to some less agreeable place than Paris.

The Hippodrome.-We spent an hour las night at the hippodrome with much pleasure. As we expected, the seats were nearly filled, and we heard the number variously estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000. Of this number many were ladies from the fashionable circles of the city, and visiors from the various parts of the country. The erformances were better than those of Saturday night, and were fully appreciated by the specta-

We were glad to perceive that our suggestion of Sunday morning was appreciated and acted upon. We have one more suggestion to make, in a kind feeling, which is, that the present arrangement of the gas-burners makes them very straining and tiresome to the eyes. If they were arranged at a suitable height on the outer circle of the arena, the eyes of the spectators would be shielded in a great measure from their perpetual glare. One or two burners outside the principal entrance would be atended with a beneficial effect.

We have no time at present to describe the per formances; in another issue we shall attempt a description. They are, however, chaste in character, and many of them are of a truly classic na-

Capitol Extension .- It is ascertained that the verage cost of bricks, per thousand, made use of at the Capitol, and purchased by the military superintendent, without advertisement and contract, is $10 91. Those from New York are thirty per cent. smaller than Washington brick, and therefore it takes thirteen hundred of them to fill the same space occupied by one thousand of the latter. There were fourteen bids for furnishing this article in Washington; the highest being $7 95, and the lowest $4 37 per thousand. The average of all of them was $6 80 10-14 per thousand.

The cost of laying the bricks, we further learn under the present system, has been $5 08 per thousand. For doing this work there were twenty-one bids; nineteen of which are below the price it has cost, and the average of all the bids is $4 06, being $1 02 less than what it has cost.

The Cumberland Coal and Iron Company, he National Intelligencer of yesterday says, has fairly domiciliated itself in our district. They have rented a portion of Easby's wharf, opposite Mason's island, where opportunities exist to accommodate the receipt and shipment of $500,000 tons of Cumberland coal per annum. We are informed on the best authority that, at high tide, there is thirteen feet of water at this point. Appliances for unloading 350 tons of coal a day from canal-boats are now under way. This company contemplate supplying the citizens of the District with coal at prices lower than heretofore-a consummation all will say, in view of late and present charges, devoutly to be wished. Alas! for weak human nature, the good resolutions were disregarded; and again has he, by his conduct, placed himself in a felon's cell.

prehensions for her safety have increased to a painful extent.

It was hoped that news might have by this time been received of her having put into the Azores to repair some slight damage or obtain supplies of coal; but even this hope has been disappointed. The barque Ithona, of Antwerp, arrived at New York on Friday, having been obliged to put into Fayal in distress. She left Fayal on the 3d of April, and makes no mention of the City of Glasgow. This was thirty-three days after the Glasgow. gow. This was thirty-three days after the Glas-gow sailed from Liverpool, and afforded time for her to have reached that port of refuge, unless she was entirely disabled or hemmed in in the ice much more completely than the other vessels that have encountered it. The dates from Liverpool are to April 8th, late enough for the Glasgow to have crossed the ocean twice, at her ordinary rate, and the hope of her having put back to an English port is also thus

Every vessel arriving at American ports reports Every vessel arriving at American ports reports extraordinary quantities of ice and icebergs in the Atlantic, directly in the ordinary track of the steamers. The ship Columbia, which sailed from Shields March 5th, four days after the Glasgow sailed from Liverpool, reports that she was in the ice from the 7th to the 11th of April; fell in with the first part of it in latitude 47, longitude 44 26', running with the wind at WSW.; was never, during that time with less than free forts to fifty running with the wind at WSW.; was never, during that time, with less than from forty to fifty large icebergs in sight, and frequently surrounded by them and much drift ice. Eighth instant, latitude 46 50', longitude 46 30', saw an immense island of ice bearing from about SW. to NNE; the nearest part of it within three or four miles dispare, and extending as far as the executed trace.

nearest part of it within three or four miles distance, and extending as far as the eye could trace from aloft, between those two points. Judged it to be about forty feet high; the last we saw was in latitude 43 30′, longitude 50; the weather was generally clear while in the ice.

Such reports as these give rise to the worst fears for the safety of the steamship and her precious freight of over four hundred human lives. The time that has clapsed since she sailed now exceeds by four days that during which we were without tidings of the Atlantic in 1851. But the Atlantic reached Cork in 25 days after she had sailed, and we have news from all the ports of sailed, and we have news from all the ports of Great Britain 38 days later than the date of the Glasgow's sailing from Liverpool.

The excellent qualities of the steamship and the experience of Capt. Morrison, (who had served long in her as mate, though this was his first voy-age in her as captain,) make us, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, still cling to the hope of her safety but we confess to apprehensions of the worst kind

More Infernal Machines .- In the London correspondence of the National Intelligencer we find the following :

"The Naval and Military Gazette has a disma account af an infernal instrument of warfare in the possession of the Czar. We have had ru-mors of it before, but it never received any specific embodiment until it was thus announced. A let-

"The inventor of the infernal submarine machines, stated to be ir the possession of the Emperor of Russia, for blowing ships out of the water by the agency of an electric wire, is a Frenchman; and when he communicated his invention to the Russian government for a consideration, he expressly stipulated that, in case of war be-tween France and Russia, he should be at liberty to give his own country the benefit of his discov-ery. It is further reported that on Friday last this entleman was received at the ministry of marine. gentleman was received at the ministry of marine, and, in the presence of M. Ducos and a board of naval officers, explained the fearful means of destruction which he claims to have originated. The board, incredulous at first, closely examined the matter, and in the end were very much struck by the demonstration, and not a little alarmed. Sir Charles Napier, on the admission of the inventor, was already prepared for what he might have to encounter. A telegraphic despatch was immediately sent off to warn Admiral Parseval Deschenes. I give this story as I have heard it from very respectable authority, but of course all acvery respectable authority, but of course all acentions must be received with due caution.

Dr. Eastman, who discovered the efficacy of his "remedy," is a physician in this city, in high standing with a large practice. We publish below the letter of Colonel Fremont to Colonel Benton, extracted from the California papers, and also the letter from Mr. Babbitt to the editors of the San Francisco Herald, correcting mistatements in regard to his report of the condition of Colonel Fremont's party.-St. Louis Democrat.

PARAWAN, IRON COUNTY, Utah Territory, Feb. 9, 1854.

My DEAR SIR: You will have the pleasure personally to hear from our friend Mr. Babbitt, who does me the kindness to take charge of my letters, good accounts of my health and present condition, and of the time when I shall probably see you. I am particularly fortunate in having met him here, as I shall owe to his kindness and valuable assistance the means of con-tinuing my journey, without such extraordinary lelay as would have rendered it comparatively useless, or the alternative of continuing it on oot. Let me suggest to you (what you would doubtless do without any suggestion) the great importance of a full conversation with Mr. Babpitt in regard to the recent railroad movements here, and the winter which has just passed. Commending him to your kindest consideration, I am sincerely, &c., JOHN C. FREMONT. Hon. Mr. BENTON, Washington City.

Letter from Colonel Babbitt.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD. Sir: I observe in the Herald of the 9th in stant, the announcement of the arrival of the steamboat Goliah, and the news of the whereabouts of Colonel Fremont, through myself, as bearer of public documents to Washington, in which not only Colonel Fremont but myself is placed in a wrong position, although the substance is true. Permit me, therefore, through your paper, to make a correct state-ment of all the real facts alluded to.

First. It is true that I have the honor of bearing the memorial of the legislative assem-bly of the Territory of Utah to the seat of government; also, the report made up by Lieut. Beckwith, of Captain Gunnison's party, who took command after the death of his captain; together with the report of Captain Morris, who ommanded the escort.

Second. It is true that I left the city of Great

Salt Lake at the time mentioned, and encountered Colonel Fremont en route at the point mentioned; which, from examination of my journal, was on the 9th day of February, in-stead of the 11th, under the following circumstances. On the afternoon of the 8th, while at our dinner, Ammon, the brother of Walker, the chief of the Utah Indians, came to my camp fire with several of his braves, who informed me that he met, the day before, a company of Americans; that they were hungry. This was about twenty-five miles from what is alled Little Salt Lake, in Parawan Valley and about two hundred and sixty miles south of Great Salt Lake. That night I overtook Colonel Fremont at a small Mormon settlement. Having the United States mail in charge I had to proceed in the morning en route for the coast. Knowing that the colonel would wish to avail himself of the opportunity of sending to Washington, I sent ne of my men to his camp, to inform him of my arrival. He sent word to me that he would see me in the morning, excusing himself that he was so worn down that he could not talk that night, having just got into camp, and various reports were abroad as to their condition. At an early hour in the morning the colone called upon me, and from his own mouth earned this to be his condition. He started from the frontier with several white men and ome ten Delaware Indians as hunters ; that they intended to kill sufficient game for their subsistence, in which they succeeded till the heavy snow met them in the mountains. The game then disappeared; and having exhausted their supplies, they had to depend upon their mules and horses, which they subsisted on till they consumed 22 in number.

The first change was a little flour and a dog, that they swapped some blankets for with Ammon. And as to the obligation that the colonel was under to me, I herewith give a copy of his letter to his father-in-law, Col. Benton.

The colonel was out of ready money, but had & Co., and other responsible banking-houses in his city for any amount. This would not buy porses and mules at that place, it being only a small settlement, having no storekeeper or other business men there. I, knowing the repuation of the banking-houses in this city, and at the same time being well acquainted with he bishop of the Mormon church at that place, made the arrangement that he would furnish the horses and mules to Col. Fremont for the ourney, and pay it out of tithing money in and, and take a draft on Palmer, Cook & Co. or the whole amount in favor of Gov. Young.

The colonel though jaded and care-worn, was not discouraged, but determined to make he central route through from there to this eity; the practicability of which we certainly oubt. But, from the known character of Col. Fremont, his report will certainly impart much valuable information touching the great basin country.

As to the report of Captain Gunnison, I unlerstand it will be substantially the same as the nemorial of the legislature of Utah Territory. he same being made from the field-notes of Captain Gunnison, taken from the Indians, and nade up by his old colleague, A. Carrington, esq., of Captain Stansbury's survey of Great Salt Lake valley. The same information I btained from Lieutenant Beckwith, who made up the field-notes, and reduced them to map orm, which I am instructed to deliver to Col Abert, of the Topographical bureau at Wash-

I discover further from the papers of this city, that I have the honor of recovering the body of the lamented Captain Gunnison. This is not true. I went, however, with fourteen men, after Captain Morris had left his body, with other equally honorable men, to be eaten by wolves, but recovered only some of his hair, which the governor of Utah sent to his wife, and some few of his bones, which were carefully interred at Fillmore city. Great blame is attached to Captain Morris, who was on the ground but a short time after the death of Gunison, and before his body was mutilated, for not securing it from further exposure. No one in Utah charges Capt. Morris with cowardice, but with great neglect. Captain Gunnison seemed to have a strong hold upon the feelings of the people of Utah, and they express great regret that such a fate should have befallen so competent an officer of government.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., March 14, 1854. P. S .- Instead of seven men dying, I under stood Colonel Fremont to say several. The man that died twenty miles from camp was a Mr. Fuller, of St. Louis.

does not compare in intensity and bitterness with the opposition of the federalists and New England clergy to the original purchase of Louisiana. Hon. Josiah Quincy lately presided over an anti-Nebraska meeting at Boston. He was in Congress in 1811, when Louisiana applied to be admitted as a State, and on the 15th of January of that year made a speech, in which he said:

so it will be the duty of some to prepare for a separation—amicably if they can, violently if they must."
